The Flower-class corvette (also referred to as the Gladiolus class after the lead ship) was a British class of 267 corvettes used during World War II, specifically with the Allied navies as anti-submarine convoy escorts during the Battle of the Atlantic. Graphite (/ ˈ ɡ r æ f aɪ t /), archaically referred to as plumbago, is a crystalline form of the element carbon. The following op-ed by Hanne Nabintu Herland concerns the Norwegian government's persistent soft spot for the Palestinians. It was originally published in Aftenposten, Norway's largest newspaper, on January 15th, 2013, and has been translated by the author. Name: Wryter: E-mail address: masterwryter@gmail.com: Well I have to agree here on the obscenity laws in Canada & especially Ontario. The censor board here is way out dated and run by such narrow minded people who are a through back to the fucken 1920's or beyond.
