Gary Klein (born February 5, 1944 in New York City, New York, U.S.) is a research psychologist famous for pioneering in the field of naturalistic decision making. By studying experts such as firefighters in their natural environment, he discovered that laboratory models of decision making could not describe it under uncertainty. More specifically, he says: The good participants differed from the bad ones ... in how often they tested their hypotheses. The bad participants failed to do this.
